

ABSTRACT

An apparatus of driving the liquid crystal display of the present invention includes a picture quality improving unit that receives input data for a frame, wherein the picture quality improving unit analyzes green input data to determine a brightness of the frame and performs a gamma compensation on the input data in accordance with the brightness of the frame to generate output data; and a timing controller that rearranges the output data to supply the rearranged output data to the data driver.